SPOHP offers semester-long academic internships, available to graduate and undergraduate students for credit as an introduction to the field of oral history.

Spring 2017

African American and Latinx Histories at UF

SPOHP’s Spring 2017 Internship course will focus on documenting the University of Florida’s rich history of African American and Latinx students, faculty, staff, and alumni at the University of Florida. What contributions have African American and Latinx students made to UF over the years? What obstacles have they faced? What is now being done to make the university a more inclusive and democratic space?

The project will center on these questions and more as interns develop an archive of African American and Latinx lives and experiences before, during, and after attending the university. Interns will conduct oral history interviews with current and past Gators. Final projects will involve creating a work presentation to be posted online for the public. Undergraduate and graduate students are welcome to apply. Applications due by Nov 15th, 2016.

For more information check out, http://oral.history.ufl.edu/research/education/internship-program/, or contact the Internship Graduate Coordinators, Johanna Mellis and Raja Rahim at spohpinternship@gmail.com.